COLONEL WHITE:

Reported that representatives of the GAO, in their review of Agency financial activities, tend to use the "shotgun" approach and had requested authority to examine a complete set of CIA regulations. Colonel White pointed out that about twenty of these regulations deal with the clandestine services. General Cabell stated that an examination of the regulations pertaining to the clandestine services would most certainly reveal methodology and tradecraft, and recommended that GAO be shown the titles of the regulations in question and nothing more. The Director approved and remarked that he assumed that the GAO representatives would not take the regulations outside of the Agency. Colonel White replied that this was correct.
